Recommended prior knowledge: Basic knowledge of EU institutions and European law; advanced understanding of international business; English B2 level
Recognition of external relevant qualification/experience:

Special regulations: The course offers an advanced introduction to topics of European Public Policy, combining theoretical with practical perspectives that are partly based on the lecturer's professional experience as a government official of an EU Member State. The first part is devoted to an overview of EU history and an analysis of the core institutions of the European Union. The second part will focus on a choice of specific topics in line with students' preferences. The course format is a combination of lecture parts, group work, and individual study. Students will be asked to engage into a variety of tasks, including the preparation of discussions, presentations, and briefings, based on primary EU sources as well as secondary material such as media reports.

International Marketing Management I

Content:

1. Introduction to International Marketing

1.1. This first section covers the differences between national and international marketing. Students will be introduced to the specific aspects of marketing strategies within an international context (e.g. social and cultural factors).

2. International Theories

2.1. In the 2nd section, selected concepts of internationalization (International Product Life Cycle (Vernon , 1966); Behavioral Theory on Internationalization (Aharoni, 1966); Eclectic Theory (Dunning, 1979); Uppsala Internationalization Model) will be discussed and evaluated with regard to their practical relevance.

3. Planning Process International Marketing

3.1. In the 3rd section, we will look at the international marketing planning and control process as a method for companies to define how they will achieve their current and future strategic aims and objectives.

4. International Marketing Strategies

4.1. In the 4th section, the challenges of Going International and Being International will be elaborated. For any company moving into a new international market the key step is to decide on the “right” market entry. Students will therefore be advised in using/developing methods for market selection, market timing and entry mode. While being international, companies are often confronted with changing market conditions, which demand an ongoing coordination of cross-border activities. This course addresses questions such as: Which changes in environmental conditions create a need for coordination? When do companies have to undertake further coordination activities? How can companies react to this need (coordination strategies)?

International Marketing Management II

Content:

1. Introduction to International Marketing Mix: The first section introduces basic decisions and actions regarding designing international marketing mix programs. Furthermore, specific problems will be presented via examples/cases.
2. How to create an International Marketing Plan?: The 2nd section gives detailed answers on how to create an international marketing plan.
3. Designing International Marketing Programs: Once a firm has decided how it will enter a foreign market, it has to design an international marketing mix program. Hereby, managers have to make fundamental decisions regarding the degree to which a firm should standardize or adapt their international marketing mix. In this section main factors favouring standardization/ adaptation will be elaborated. These two distinctive options will be discussed throughout the course. Following this introduction, every marketing mix instrument (product, price, distribution, and promotion within the international context) will be explained in detail. On this basis, students will design an international marketing plan.
4. Managing the International Marketing Mix: Although every element of the marketing mix is important, the relative importance of one versus another may vary between markets. This section gives an overview of methods to monitor international marketing programs appropriately.

Prüfungsform:

Die konkreten Prüfungsmodalitäten entnehmen Sie bitte dem Prüfungsschema, welches vom Dozenten innerhalb der ersten beiden Vorlesungswochen bereit gestellt wird. (100%)

Zusätzliche Regelungen:

Bei dem Modul handelt es sich um ein gemeinsames Wahlpflichtmodul mit dem Studiengang Business Management. Im Studiengang Business Management werden 6.0, also 1.0 mehr CP vergeben. Dieser Tatsache wird dadurch Rechnung getragen, dass den Studierenden aus EMM ein abgegrenzter Themenschwerpunkt samt (Teil-)Prüfungsleistung im entsprechenden Umfang erlassen wird. Zwingender Bestandteil wird eine Präsentation sein, die auf Deutsch oder Englisch gehalten werden kann.

Content:

1. The course is based on simulation of complex international commercial disputes from the fields of contract law in international sales (terms, quality), intellectual property law, construction disputes, and also disputes of a more personal nature between business partners.
2. Students address the process of commercial mediation and the mediation principles underlying it. They will distinguish mediation from other dispute resolution procedures (litigation, arbitration).
3. Students gain practical mediation skills, both as parties with business interests and in mediation advocacy and as third-party mediators.
4. Students will prepare scenarios in the roles of requesting and responding party and mediator. Preparation will include the writing of strategy papers (mediation plans) and opening statements.
5. Training focuses on simulation of mediation sessions and communication skills and includes a joint feedback culture.
6. Case analysis focuses on understanding business interests and legal frameworks and on addressing parties' process interests in mediation. Students analyse cases in writing.
7. The course includes an overview of international commercial mediation practice in various parts of the world and jurisdictions.

International Marketing Management III

Content:

1. "With the rapid expansion of global markets, managers are struggling to balance the paradoxical demand to think globally and act locally. That imperative requires them to move people, ideas, products, and information around the world to meet local needs" (Ulrich, 1998). Thereby, cultural intelligence proves to be - next to a deep understanding of intercultural marketing - a critical skill for nowadays marketers. This 3rd semester course aims to strengthen students' abilities in both skills by adding a truly (cross)- cultural perspective to their marketing understanding and expertise. Therefore, students will carry out supervised research on cross- cultural marketing aspects. They will be requested to write a paper and present it in class.
2. Cultural Foundations: In this section the powerful environmental factor of culture will be explored. From a research perspective we will focus on questions such as: What is culture in the context of marketing? What is the role of culture as a factor influencing individual decisions? A selection of cultural concepts, cultural dimensions and classifications of culture will be discussed and evaluated with regard to their practical relevance.
3. Interculturality: Aspects of interculturality in a national and international context will be addressed in the 2nd section. We will look at key areas for action in Ethno - Marketing, International Marketing and Intercultural Marketing and will explore similarities and distinctions in the mode of action.
4. Intercultural Marketing: The 3rd section focuses on Intercultural Marketing. Students get insights in to aspects such as cross - cultural buying behaviour, developing country profiles, cross - cultural market segmentation, paradigm of standardization/ adaptation, strategy of adapted standardization and cultural aspects in marketing - mix decisions.
5. Intercultural Communication/ Culture and Negotiations: Due to the fact, that marketers are one of the biggest practitioners of intercultural communications, this section prepares students to communicate with culturally diverse customers, business partners as well as to cooperate in, and to run successfully multi- cultural working groups.
